Ministry examines plan

Emergency dept. remains open

by Andrew Milne

The jury is still out on the fate of Minden Hospital's emergency ward.

The ward will, however, continue to operate at 16 hours per day until a decision has been made.

The facility's parent hospital, St. Joseph's of Peterborough, submitted an operating plan to the Ministry of Health (MOH) last week which may or may not call for the closure of the ward. The MOH, however, is still reviewing the plan, and says it may not deliver a verdict for a week or two yet. What the plan recommends has not been made public.

Minden hospital director Foster Loucks announced to staff October 27 that until the decision is made, the hospital will continue to operate at its current level — 16 hours emergency ward service, with the ward closing between midnight and 8 a.m.

St. Joseph's had been considering closing the hospital and opening an office hours clinic as of the beginning of October. The MOH, however, said they could not do this without submitting the revised operating plan.

The move was recommended by the hospital's finance committee, in response to a critical shortage of doctors in Minden to staff the wards, and the ensuing funding crisis. St. Joseph's Hospital paid doctors from Lindsay and Barrie to staff the ward, and paid them a salary on top of OHIP billings to make it worth their while, but doing so proved prohibitively expensive.

The Progressive-Conservative provincial government had promised during their election campaign to address the problem — common to much of rural Ontario — of staffing rural emergency wards, and spoke to the issue during their throne speech, but has not as yet stated specifically what action will be taken. A report prepared for the MOH by fact finder Graham Scott — the Scott Report — did recommend a number of specific changes to address the problems, including changes to fee structures for doctors and to doctor education. The government has not yet responded to the report, but says they are studying it.

Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Jeanne Anthon says she feels part of the reason the decision on the hospital has been delayed may be that the province will be moving on a general solution to rural health care problems in the near future.

Anthon, who spoke with Victoria Haliburton MPP Chris

Soon-to-be-married Shannon Davis and Carl Shatraw, along with Davis' mother Gloria were westbound on 503, near Head Lake, west of Norland, when they encountered the convoy. The convoy, two flatbed haulers carrying two sections of a prefabricated house being taken to Sudbury, headed by a wide load escort vehicle, was eastbound. Shannon was driving.

The vehicle slid sideways into the front of the second hauler. The impact broke away a substantial portion of Canada speaks: voices of the Montréal rally

by Andrew Milne

It's a story of large numbers, and of deep — if subtle — passions.

Picture more than 100,000 people, from all across a country thousands of kilometres wide, joining to deliver a message — of what they and their country stands for — what they have and what they stand to lose.

"It was really something. I've never had that kind of experience before. There were just so many people, and everyone was positive," said Ryan Ladurantaye.

Ingoldsby residents Ryan, Brock, Sarah, and their father, Brian went to the rally in Montréal in support of unity, October 26, for a number of reasons — partly to tell the people of Québec what they mean to the rest of the country, partly to be a part of history, partly because of their own history. Brian's parents are from Québec, and much of his extended family still lives there. It is, says Ryan, part of their identity.

Also on the road that day were seven students from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, who, unable to squeeze onto the 130 packed buses leaving Ottawa, drove the entire distance themselves to be there.

Said Cara Donnery, "We decided it was probably going to be one of the biggest things ever to happen in Canada in our lives, and that we should try to be there."

Donnery went with fellow students Ryan Ellis, Meaghan Obee, Mike Hartwick, Bobby Griffin, Derek Rodley, and Dan Selbie. Their reasons were similar to those of the Ladurantaye family — to experience a part of Canadian history, and, together with people from as far away as both coasts of the country, to deliver a message.

The campaign leading to today's referendum, says Brian Ladurantaye, has had some impact on the lives of his family. He has one uncle who is quite proudly, and quite vocally, a sovereigntist, which has led to some interesting discussions.

He doesn't know what it will mean to their family if Québec does vote yes. "You've got to respect what they believe," he says. "And that's what my uncle is saying, too. He just hopes that after it's settled, whichever way it goes, both sides have respect for the decision of the other."

He compares separation to a divorce — go your separate ways, and, like it or not, you're still part of the family in some sense, with issues still to resolve, emotional ripples spreading in every direction.

For Brock, being there, being a part of history, hearing people speak of their hopes, their fears, is something that will stay with him. They spoke to some people from Montréal who told them of their fears, of what it would mean to them to separate from Canada. But the rally on the whole, he says, was quite cheerful.

Says Sarah, "It was incredible. There were hundreds of Canadian flags and Québec flags waving all over the place, and thousands and thousands of people. You could hardly walk in the streets, they were so full."

There were some moments that were less positive. "On the way down," she says, "it was kind of intimi-

Food bank searching for new quarters and volunteers

by Jerry Grozelle

Anson, Hindon and Minden council received a letter from Reverend Brian Parker of the Anglican Parish of Minden and Kinmount regarding the expected crisis situation regarding the local food bank.

Parker explained that St. Paul's Church started a food cupboard on a shoe-string budget about five years ago to help meet the needs of a few people. In the beginning, those needs were easily met, but with the economic changes over the past five years, the demand has increased dramatically. With the funds and supplies remaining relatively constant, the food bank has been forced to decrease the maximum voucher amount it can allow per family to a third of what was previously provided.

"This accompanies (usually) enough foodstuffs to get people through maybe three days, if they are resourceful," Parker stated.

He added that the time the food cupboard is open has been cut to two hours per week, on Saturday mornings because of a lack of volunteers to operate the facility.

"As I'm sure you can understand, it has been a difficult time lately to try to meet the ever-increasing needs of people in our region while, at the same time, having to decrease our own facilities," he stated. "All of this concern is greatly amplified by the radical cuts in social welfare. We have no way of being sure, but our sense of things is that past figures of 38 per cent unemployment in this county will seem like Utopia by comparison."

Parker fears that the situation will worsen and many "borderline cases" will be forced to rely on the food cupboard to keep their families nourished.

Parker explained that Our Lady of Fatima Church and Zion United Church and others, as well as numerous local service clubs and businesses have assisted.

Parker offered some proposals to the municipality, emphasizing that he is "completely open to negotiation and discussion" regarding those proposals.

"First, we need to expand our facilities, from our little 10 by 10 room at St. Paul's, to a separate building which would be more visible in the community," he explained. "This, we believe, will emphasize the community nature of the food cupboard and increase its visibility and its ability to meet needs."

He asked council if it might be able to provide a building, possibly the old ambulance building, or perhaps at least subsidize the rent of a presently vacant building in Minden. He pointed out that the rent for the food bank in Haliburton is paid by the municipality.

Parker also explained that he would like to see the food bank come under the direction of a board of management, which would be more representative of the community "perhaps with membership from supporting groups and all the local churches."

"This would ease the burden on the very small group which has responsibility now," he said. "Hopefully, we could still see this as a Christian outreach, but by covering a wider base, it might be less threatening to some non-church people."

The need to increase the volunteer force was another concern he feels needs to be addressed. To do that, he proposes putting out an appeal to groups and individuals who would help to operate the facility under the direction of the proposed board. He stressed that confidentiality of personnel and files are an absolute must, when volunteers are being considered.

"The three-fold proposal represents our dreams for the area and for the food bank," he said. "It is not just based on a whim, but, as I have illustrated, it arises from the sense that there is an extreme urgency and critical future for the facility as well as for our area. We feel that the food bank, as it is now set up, cannot continue to meet what promises to be the needs of the people in the very near future."

A decision regarding the participation of the Municipality of Anson, Hindon and Minden has been deferred until the next council meeting. In the meantime, council will explore the possibilities.

The old ambulance building has been turned over to the Minden Fire Department as a storage facility.

Councillor Grant Plooard suggested that the Fire Department may be willing to become involved in the project by providing space, but he pointed out that there may be a very valid reason why it can't. He will bring the subject up at tomorrow's meeting of fire department personnel and report back to council at the November 9 meeting.

Minden Sign project may get $1,000 boost

The Minden Sign project may get a welcome boost.

Timbersport Festival Committee officials were promised a $1,000 grant for the 1995 event from the Minden BIA. But since the funds were not required, the committee is planning to ask the BIA to redirect the money to the Minden Sign project.

A request for funding from the municipality for the 1996 Timbersport Festival will be considered when council is preparing its 1996 budget.

her vehicle's rear section, and tore open the back of the passenger compartment.

Said Davis, "The tractor trailer looked like it was a little on my side so I pulled over to squeeze by it. I caught the shoulder of the road, and it was really soft. It was pulling me into the rock cut, so I cranked the wheel back. I missed the first one, then I saw the second one coming head on. I cranked the wheel again, and it hit the back of the car and spun us around."

"I didn't even realize the back of the car was missing until I was out of it."

So it's lucky no one got hurt. She laughs.

"It was amazing," she says.

All three were taken to Ross Memorial in Lindsay, and released later that day.

Construction mishap claims former resident

A funeral was held Thursday for a former Minden resident who died in an industrial accident last week in Peterborough.

David Besner, 30, of Lindsay, was working on the new Ministry of Natural Resources building in Peterborough when he fell to his death from a scaffold three floors above the ground. Besner was a carpenter.

The accident occurred Monday afternoon.

Well known in the area for his involvement in sports, David Besner was married to the former Lisa Bagshaw of Minden. The couple has a five week old son.

50 years of good health

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge Health Unit marks half a century of service

by Andrew Milne

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit celebrated its 50th anniversary last week.

The occasion was marked by speeches in offices of the unit across the region it governs. Current medical officer of health Alex Hukowich spoke briefly on the unit's history, and on its prospects for the future, at the October 27 event in Haliburton.

Though positive about the unit's potential to adapt to changes, Hukowich did have some words of concern for the unit, which, like many government agencies, is feeling the sting of provincial funding reductions.

Said Hukowich, "Most of you have heard of the phoenix — the bird that used to rise from its own ashes to renew itself. In my view we shouldn't have to be reduced to ashes in order to renew ourselves."

The HKPR unit was one of the first in the province, founded in June of 1945, as the Second World War wound down, and governments began focusing more on domestic issues again. The unit, a type of intergovernmental body funded and administered both at the local and provincial levels, concentrated on the control of communicable diseases, and on the enforcement of hygiene and health standards, with the aim of preventing disease.

In its history it has battled outbreaks of polio, rabies, and meningitis, vaccinated the population against diphtheria, smallpox, and whooping cough, and grown from a shoestring operation serving Durham and Northumberland counties after the war for $60,000 annually, to a much larger organization, serving three counties (Victoria, Haliburton, and Northumberland), and operating on $23 million a year.

Since its founding, says current Medical Officer of Health Hukowich, though the essential role of the unit has remained the same, there have been a lot of changes.

"We used to deal a lot with communicable diseases," he says, "and now, chronic diseases are the bigger problem. And that's harder — chronic diseases rarely have simple, quick solutions. We know why they're caused, but they're caused by behaviour — and changing people's behaviour can be quite difficult."

"Especially," he says, using the example of smoking and the tobacco companies, "when there are very powerful corporations with a lot of money at their disposal that will do everything they can to prevent people from changing... And you know they will. That's how they make their money."

Hukowich also spoke of health units as often finding themselves in a dilemma. Forced by the provincial government to run the approved core programs, and too financially pressured, the units, he says, can wind up unable to answer to needs more specific to a community. That, he cautions, can drive a wedge between the unit and the community it supports, making it hard to administer less popular programs, like, for example, restaurant inspections.

Said Hukowich, "The ideas that were behind these core programs were good — that there would be a basic level of service, that any resident of the province of Ontario could have access to. ... But when these came forward we were told that would be a floor — that would be the level from which we could build locally, and provide other kinds of services and activities. Because of funding constraints, more and more what was supposed to be a floor is becoming a ceiling for us — where we can't do things beyond that because there is no money, no support from the province for doing things beyond that. And not only do they become a ceiling, they become a wall — the kind of wall that if we're not careful will separate us from the community that we're intended to serve."

Former Medical Officer of Health Don Mikel was also present to speak. Mikel had similar words for funding cutbacks, comparing the situation to one in which the unit is expected to make bricks without straw, but praised the efforts and ability of the unit's staff and board to cope.

Said Mikel, "We were the first health unit in Ontario, and therefore in the whole world, because they don't do it anywhere else, to be accredited. And it's been maintained at the maximum level ever since. The reasons for us having such a good health unit are twofold. The first is that we've had an excellent board... Secondly, we've had an excellent staff."

Mikel also said that during the recent meningococcal outbreak in the Lindsay and Port Hope areas, part of the reason the unit was delayed in responding had not been revealed at the time.

Said Mikel, "I guess I can say it now, though I was asked not to at the time, but when that outbreak had occurred, and I asked for some vaccine, the ministry said you're going to have to stall — we only have 85 doses in the province. They said they didn't want the fact to get out because the ministry would look bad. So I said well our health unit can look bad for a couple weeks if you can get pulling at it."

Mikel also praised the efforts of the unit in responding to the crisis.

Said Mikel, "The thing that most impressed me was how everybody in the health unit, regardless of their department, helped. The health promotions department did a lot of printing for us, printing consents and that sort of thing. The health inspectors were running in all directions delivering vaccines and supplies. And of course the health nurses did a great job in immunizing 10,000 people at a time."

Lutterworth Reeve and former County Warden Jim McMahon also spoke to the gathering, on behalf of the county, as did current unit chair William Wensley. Wensley also presented a plaque to the staff on behalf of the board, thanking them for their professionalism and dedication over the years.

Last of the Kanawa canoe collection moved by Carol Moffatt

Thirty volunteers, half of them local folks, turned up at the Kanawa Canoe Museum in a pelting downpour October 14 for what organizers dubbed The Great Canoe Move.

After years of considerations and negotiations, and Volunteers prepare to load a carefully wrapped canoe onto a trailer for the trip to its new home in Peterborough.

Framed by a carved archway, workers prepare to remove another specimen from the Kanawa Canoe Museum near Ox Narrows. The collection was housed in a log structure adjacent to Camp Kandalore.

months of painstaking cleaning and cataloguing, the last six--and most valuable--of the canoes were carefully moved, en masse, to their new home in Peterborough.

"It's been a long time coming and it's really exciting that it's at last really happening," said John Jennings, a Trent University professor who is also Vice Chair of the Canadian Canoe Museum Board of Trustees.

Kirk Whipper, owner of the museum in Stanhope Township, spent many years acquiring what is now considered the world's finest, most comprehensive collection of canoes.

Mr. Whipper, unfortunately, was unable to attend the Great Move.

Included in the collection are what may be the only existing original birch bark canoes, several Nootka dugout canoes and a small, round vessel made of animal skin and a complex internal structure, called a Skinboat.

The collection has long been housed in a large, rambling log building on the grounds of Camp Kandalore, just south of Ox Narrows on Highway 35.

It's difficult to imagine the breadth and wealth of the collection, but included in it are specimens from around the world, from places such as the Phillipines, Fiji, Alaska, the Aleutian Islands, Greenland, England, Africa, Thailand and all over Canada.

"This collection is world class and nothing else would compare," said Don Curtis, chair of the new museum board.

"We're so thankful that the canoes were housed here and preserved here," he added.

For John Jennings, a Canadian history professor at Trent, the significance of the collection, and the new museum, is enormous.

"This collection going to Peterborough makes sense. Peterborough has been the canoe-building centre of the world since 1858. John Stephenson patented the canoe making process, in Peterborough, and sold the patent to the Peterborough Canoe Company," he explains.

Shortly thereafter, other companies, such as the Lakefield Canoe Company, the Rice Lake Canoe Company and the Canadian Canoe Company joined in the manufacturing market. All maintained a strong foothold in the industry until the fibreglass canoe came along.

"Until fibreglass, that was the canoe centre of the world," said Jennings, an avid canoeist.

"The canoe, more than any other thing in our culture, is a symbol of history. It's the only symbol that positively unites the English, the French and the Native peoples who forged this country. The Americans crossed their country on horseback; we crossed ours in canoes. The birch bark (canoe) is absolutely Canadian; no other peoples in the world ever developed a canoe made from birch bark," he says.

The museum has been a long time in the making. When an original deal to split the collection between Haliburton and Port Hope fell through, Mr. Whipper, a former professor at the University of Toronto, approached the Trent University people again, says Jennings.

"A committee evolved and it expanded into the community," he says.

The Canadian Canoe Museum, although loosely affiliated with Trent University, is not Trent University property. The museum currently has no federal, provincial or municipal funding, says Curtis.

"The city gave us four and a half acres on Little Lake to build on, Outboard Marine Renovations (a Peterborough company) gave us a hundred thousand square feet of warehouse space and we have been given some tax relief by the city. If we're fortunate we'll have a display at Little Lake and storage at Outboard Marine," explains Curtis.

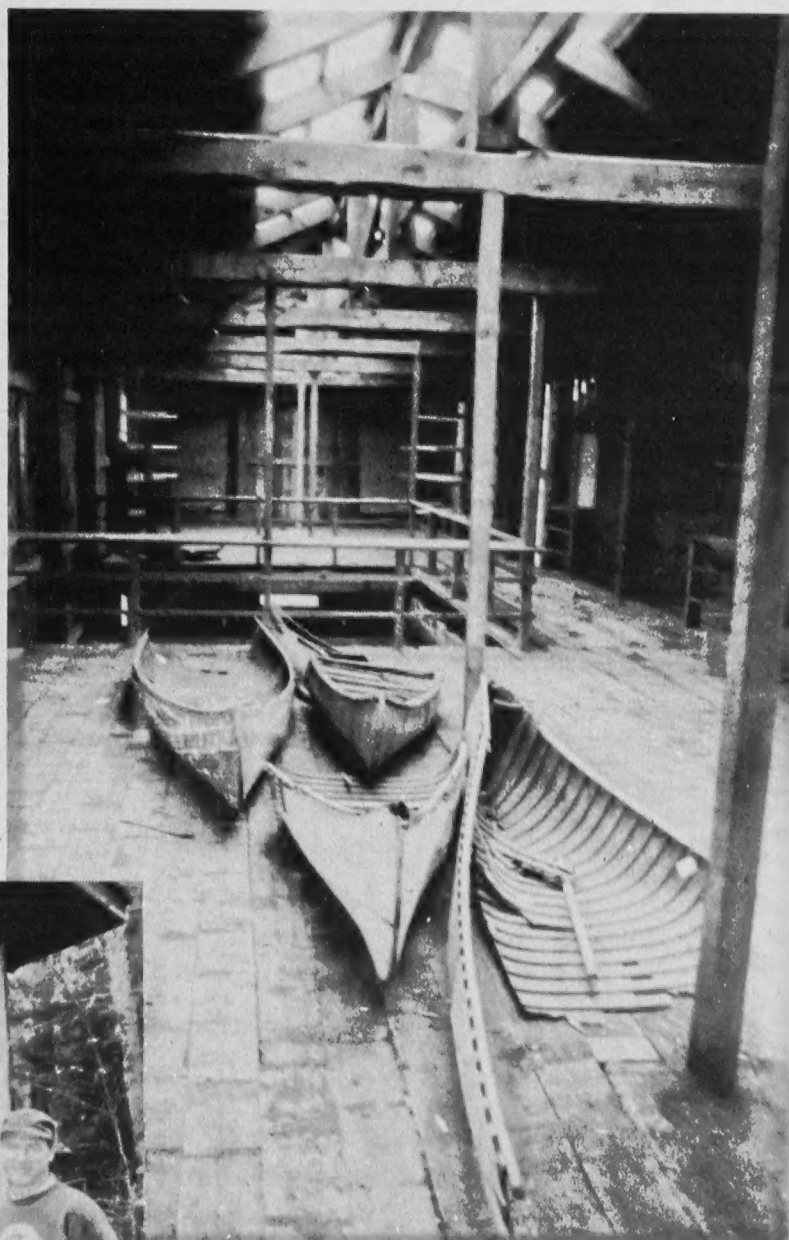

"The one thing that clinched the arrangement with Outboard Marine was a slide show of the canoes themselves. When people think of canoes they think of that old thing tied up at the dock. But these canoes are aboriginal dugouts, birch barks, cedar strips and basswoods and the whole series of plastics. One of the dugouts was built to look like cedar strip, but it was carved from a single tree. Some of these newer canoes are worth three thousand dollars apiece, but ones like the big birch bark canoe are priceless and irreplaceable," says Curtis.

The board has raised money for the collection and current memberships nets about $35,000 a year for day-to-day costs, such as hiring the moving van to deliver the weekend's delicate cargo to its new home.

Curtis says a local fundraising campaign is ongoing in Peterborough and area, and a national campaign is also proceeding. Jennings says they hope to have satellite exhibits across the country to provide a national sense of pride and ownership in the museum and it's almost 500 canoes.

There's a lot of work to do now that the Great Move is finished. The official opening of the Canadian Canoe Museum is planned for Saturday, May 11, 1996. It will be held in conjunction with Heritage Canoe Week and will include an international canoe conference and a voyageur dinner.

"The entire collection will be on display and we'll have some exhibits done by then. I have an odd feeling as these canoes leave (Kanawa). This lovely old building has been such a marvelous home for them. It's a good thing that they're going where they'll be safe from fire or theft or anything else. They'll be in a museum setting for the first time, but they're going into a factory where you lose the aura of this marvelous place here," says Jennings.

With the precious cargo loaded and ready for the trip to Peterborough, workers gather for a champagne toast to the old museum before sending the canoes on their way to Peterborough.

Members of the Minden Beaver Colony, their parents, municipal staff and staff members of Dollo's IGA braved a light rain Sunday morning (October 22) to make the community a greener place. Under the IGA's Hometown Trees program, the group planted 70 white ash on the hillside beside the Minden Curling Club. This is the third year the program has been organized by Dollo's IGA.

Emergency status awaiting MOH report

Hodgson earlier in the week in Toronto said "We were given a strong message that the Scott Report is very much on the front burner, and that some of the recommendations will be issued or implemented in the next few months... I'm hoping that's one of the reasons for the delay."

Anthon also said that, should the ward be closed due to the immediate problems of funding constraints and the doctor shortage, opening up emergency services in the community again could well prove extraordinarily difficult.

St. Joseph's is expected to hand over operation of the Minden hospital to a local group, the Acting Health Services Board (AHSB), sometime next year or in early 1997. The AHSB has also expressed concerns about the difficulty of getting emergency care set up again in the Minden area if the hospital is closed now.

Anthon also said the public has expressed a great deal of anxiety over the issue to her.

Said Anthon, "there's been a lot of concern wherever I go, and a lot of despair that they will have to find their real health needs in other communities. The seniors especially have been very vocal."

Anthon also spoke in support of the recent recommendation of St. Joseph's local Community Advisory Committee. The committee recommended that the ward be restored to 24 hour, seven days a week operation — the schedule it had been keeping until the beginning of October.

Said Anthon, "That was the obvious intent of the community. That was the only reasonable service to be provided, and they couldn't recommend anything else. I sense that St. Joseph's is going to go ahead with their eight hour (office hours clinic) recommendation, yet I don't see any support behind that, in the sense that they haven't found any doctors yet that are willing to work those kinds of hours. So I think that's a dead-end option."

Anthon also said she believes emergency services should be maintained in Minden, in the long run.

Said Anthon, "If there is to be one emergency centre for Haliburton county, it obviously should be next to or adjacent to highway 35, considering the traffic count and that we are the most ready access to the major hospitals and specialists south of here."

Staff at the hospital, say union representatives, continue to cope with uncertainty.

Said Ontario Nursing Association rep Jeannette Gibbons, "It certainly isn't getting any easier — as time goes on it gets a little harder. None of us know what direction to go in."

Canadian Union of Public Employees rep Gwen Hewitt said the delays are "wearing a little thin".

Said Hewitt, "I really don't know what to say. It's more of the same. We still don't know what's happening."

Hewitt said the staff has been looking for work, in preparation for a possible closure, but it has proved quite difficult to find anything.

Said Hewitt, "It's difficult for any of us to think about accepting another job or at least making a final decision, when we don't know if we're going to end up with work here. If we're going to end up with work, obviously that's our first choice — rather than leaving the community... It's a frustrating process."

dating, because of the cars that were beeping their horns, going alongside of the bus waving, with thumbs up, some of them thumbs down, some of them you could tell were incredibly mad at us, they were hanging out their windows screaming at the top of their lungs."

But for the most part, she says, the people she met were very happy to see them, very grateful.

"It was interesting," she says. "We were talking to someone from Nova Scotia, and she said she really thinks it's too bad that Bouchard would be more of a Québécois — as in more of a Québécois than he's Canadian — as opposed to the prime minister and the group of people that were there and who were Canadian before they were anything."

Says Ryan Ellis, who went with the seven from the high school, "It looked like the OJ trial. There was a van there from every news station I've ever seen — most of the northern states and all of Canada. There were helicopters flying over. It was just crazy."

"For our generation," says Ellis, "this really matters. The yes supporters, they're dwelling, it seems, on things that happened in the past. The no supporters are looking towards the future and the present... We're not even going to be given the chance to make a difference if they separate now."

Donnery recalls one slightly acrimonious incident in the entire trip — on the subway, enroute to Place du Canada, a yes supporter, sporting a clearly visible "Oui" button got onto a car full of people going to the rally, and a brief debate ensued. But for the most part, she says, the no supporters were out in such force that actually seeing such a display was quite rare.

Like many, Donnery worries about what will happen to the rest of the country if Québec leaves confederation, about the possibility of a gradual disintegration of the bonds between the remaining provinces. "I want to live and have my family and grow up in a unified Canada," she says.

She does, however, feel she can understand some of the grievances the sovereigntists are expressing. "And I think," she says, "they don't realize that the rest of Canada does care about their culture and their position in Canada."

Meaghan Obee talks easily and at length about her experience at the rally, and what she feels a separated Québec would mean to her and to her country. She's travelled to Europe, and that experience left her wondering aloud if Canadians really realize what it is they have in Canada.

"When I was away," she says, "you didn't ever see that show of unity at all, no matter what happened in the country. When I was there it was only a little after Germany had been reunited, and Germans were saying oh, we don't want this. They didn't seem to have the kind of unity Canada does. I think the sad part is that it takes something like this to see it."

And if Québec separates? What then.

"Basically," says Obee, "we lose the greatest nation in the world."

There is little doubt most Canadians spent a restless weekend waiting in anticipation for the vote to be held today in Quebec. The spirits of most people were buoyed by the demonstration of concern that was mounted Friday, drawing close to 150,000 people to Montreal in support of a unified country.

As impressive as that rally was, we fear it may have been too little and too late to redirect the course on which the Quebec voters seem to be headed. While there are few outside of Quebec who want to see the country broken apart, the decision is obviously beyond our grasp and there is little we can do but watch, wait and hope that reason will prevail.

Unfortunately, the debate within Quebec is being driven by emotion more than reason. All indications are that a decision to separate will not do anyone any good. The volatile stock markets, the drop in the dollar, and the actions of some in removing their assets from the province, leave little doubt that should the yes side win, the country's economy will be in for a rough ride.

Although a win by the no side would likely stabilize those economic jitters for the moment, it will not eliminate the underlying problems, nor will it put the issue to rest. That victory, if it should occur, will be a slim one, leaving in its wake the pent up frustration of close to half the electorate in Quebec. It's a sure bet that within a couple of years another effort will be mounted to once again seek a mandate from the province's residents for separation.

Those who suggest that the intervening period will leave time for the politicians to work out an acceptable agreement must remember that while the rest of Canada has a strong emotional attachment to Quebec, there are few who will accept a situation where one province will be granted special status not shared by the other regions of the country.

Unfortunately, either way Canada will lose.

We believe and hope that reason will prevail today as Quebecers go to the polls, however we also fear for the future of our great country no matter the outcome.

Voting with his heart

Editor:

Today, as Canadians, we cannot sing O Canada without feeling some anxiety. We are all aware of how threatening the Quebec referendum is for the future of Canada.

We all recognize there is no place better than Canada and how deeply other nations of the world envy us. There are a lot of good reasons to be proud Canadians. I have trouble understanding how some can find appeal in such a radical option. No matter what the differences are that distinguish the cultures in Canada, none are worth ripping apart this country for.

As a native person living on a federal reserve surrounded by Quebec, I can assure you that it is a very unpleasant situation and it raises deep concerns in our community. I have always committed myself to the interests of Canada and still do my best to promote the values that we all share in this country.

As a business person, I have learned never to mix politics and business. This is still the best attitude to take, but today I believe this issue is too important for me to remain quiet. When I see my own country threatened, I cannot and must not remain inactive. This is why I have taken a stand against the separatists and try every day to persuade more people to stand by the side of Canada and to proclaim it to others.

I strongly oppose the separation plan and I am confident the hearts of the majority of my fellow Quebecois will lead them to Canada.

No flags

Editor:

Flurr da what?

Once again I've tried to promote something that I feel very strongly about and Haliburton County (closed-minded capital of the province) has sent me out of town for another purchase.

Since I was born and raised in 'La Belle Province' I thought I'd like to have a Quebec flag on my front lawn to show my support for a "No" vote. I called all around the county looking for a fleur-de-lis flag and the response I received was, "Flurrr da what?" I hope, after today, we can still call all ten provinces Canada.

Lisa Robertson,
Haliburton.

The Haliburton County Committee Against the Abuse of Women (HCCAAB) would like to offer congratulations and best wishes to the staff and volunteers with S.I.R.C.H. for their commitment and hard work in developing, building and opening the Women's Emergency House.

Thank you

Editor:

This letter is long over-due.

On September 23, the Terry Fox Run was held in Minden. Many people from Haliburton took part in the event. I felt honoured being a part of such a professionally run event. Every person was made to feel welcome and special—from the people taking registration to the volunteers at the various stations along the way.

I would like to especially thank Linda Brandon who snapped photographs of us as we flew by. They were great to look at the next week.

Thank you to the whole organizing committee for all your hard work. It was well worth it.

Patty Brydon, Haliburton.

HCCAAB is a committee developed in 1985 to prevent the abuse of women in Haliburton County and to ensure services and supports are available for women who are abused. Over the past year, we have organized and facilitated the Community/Ac-countability Framework project, a community initiative dealing with the development of a framework that will ensure the co-ordination of the delivery of services for victims of abuse. We have over 60 members from this community involved in this project. Over and over we have heard from these members how important it is to have a safe place for women to go when they leave abusive situations.

We feel very proud of Haliburton County for the commitment it has demonstrated in dealing with the issue of violence against women and their children. We are glad to be a part of this community.

The flat tax: a money saver

by Paul Pagnuelo

How much does our current income tax system cost? Plenty.

Not exactly a definitive answer - but then again, it's not exactly a straight-forward question. Our tax system is so complex and riddled with so many inequities that it is impossible to make a pin-point assessment of the total costs. But, what the heck, let's take a crack at it.

There are at least five, and perhaps six, areas of cost associated with the tax system. They are:

- Revenue Canada - $2.2 billion
- Taxpayers compliance costs - $10 billion (based on US estimates)
- Professional fees for tax planning - $3.5 billion
- Lost productivity - no figures available
- Mistakes made in filing and processing of returns - no data available
- Tax evasion - $100 billion (estimate of the size of Canada's underground economy)
- Tax expenditures - $30 billion (federal government estimate).

Adding all this up one arrives at an extremely conservative estimate of over $150 billion a year lost through the tax system. Yikes!

How do we stop this haemorrhage? So far the best idea has to be a flat tax. The flat tax would reduce all these cost components to more acceptable levels.

First by reducing the complexity of the system, the flat tax would, in turn, reduce the size of the bureaucracy. We wouldn't need thousands of clerks and telephone operators to make the tax machine hum.

Second the massive compliance costs for business and individuals filing income tax would be all but eliminated. A post card sized tax return could be completed by virtually everyone without the traditional blood, sweat and tears.

Third, with no more mazes to run, the entire tax preparation industry would turn, almost overnight, to more productive endeavours. All that money going to paper pushers to comply with government regulations could be spent, say, on a new combine or on the development of new computer software. Productivity would rise and government would probably find revenue rise in response.

Fourth, the simplicity of the flat tax would greatly reduce the number of filing mistakes made every year. Fewer mistakes means lower costs.

Fifth, the flat tax could make a serious dent in the amount of cheating that goes on in the tax system. Without having to jump through hoops to fork over their government tithe, Canadians would be more likely to be up front with the tax collector. More importantly, taxpayers would feel that everyone is being treated equally under a flat rate. It would no longer be OK to cheat because others are not paying their fair share. Flattening the tax would inject underground dollars back into the legal economy.

Finally closing loopholes would eliminate the government's list of tax expenditures. Again, that's a saving of somewhere around $30 billion - a quarter of what we spend on programs every year.

Would the flat tax eliminate all the costs of our current tax system? No. Would they be dramatically reduced? Yes.

Cutting costs doesn't always involve dumping or curtailing programs. Sometimes it just takes a little original thinking and the guts to try something new.

(Paul Pagnuelo is a spokesman for the Ontario Taxpayers Federation.)

Just the bare facts

One of my favourite writers died not too long ago. British chap by the name of Anthony Burgess.

I admired Burgess for many of the books he wrote — Enderby, Malaysian Trilogy, A Mouthful of Air — but mostly I admire him for a book title he wrote.

Burgess is the guy who wrote the book called The End of The World News. He lifted the phrase directly from the traditional BBC radio news sign-off, where the announcer finishes reading his last news item and then intones, "And that is the end...of the world news."

Except when Burgess shanghaied the words, he twisted the emphasis so that it sounded like he was delivering news about the End of The World.

It wasn't a great book, but it was a powerful title. Powerful enough to make the BBC change the way its announcers sign off their newscasts.

Me? I don't have any end of the world news for you today.

But I can bring you the latest in World Nudes.

Outbreaks of unbridled nudity have been running — make that 'streaking' — around the globe of late, and I am not the only one who is concerned about it. The Chinese government was so worried about the possibility of streakers at the recent UN World Conference on Women that authorities issued an official pamphlet for Beijing cab drivers on how to handle nude passengers.

"Stop your cab and put on the handbrake" it reads. "Then jump out and shout for a policeman."

A high school valedictorian in Liberty, New York made certain that no one fell asleep during her address. After she got to the podium, and before she began her speech, Eva Noel Bevilacqua, casually slipped her graduation gown off her shoulders and down on the stage, leaving Ms. Bevilacqua dressed in mortar board, black leather boots and nothing in between.

But it is in Britain that people have been doffing their duds with an enthusiasm seldom seen in that dank inhabited land. Bird watchers in Coleford, England have been reporting a rare species indeed. A jogger wearing only running shoes has been seen jogging (and jiggling) along the hedgerows five times.

Police believe it is "an eccentric trying to keep cool."

Meanwhile in Manchester, an even rarer breed of streaker has prompted a call for Parliament to intervene. These streakers appear exclusively during cricket games. During an England/West

Black'n White

by Arthur Black

Indies match, streakers invaded the field seven times.

If you've ever endured a cricket match, you'll appreciate the need for diversion.

But my favourite British UFO (stands for Unidentified Flopping Objects) appeared on a British TV news show last spring. Apparently on this show, they have their weather guy standing on a floating map of Great Britain about 15 yards wide, which is moored at the Liverpool Docks. Last May, the regular weatherman was a tad non-plussed to see a naked man leaping onto his map right in the middle of the broadcast. The weatherman valiantly attempted to carry on talking about low pressure troughs and high pressure ridges as the naked stranger cartwheeled from England to Wales, executing a pas de deux just south of Gretna Green.

But it was his attempted grand jete from Scotland to Northern Ireland that did the interloper in. He lost his footing and stumbled into the ocean — but not before he'd made the weather forecast one that millions of viewers would remember forever.

Not all British nudists get off that lightly. In Canberra, Australia, Liz and Phil were physically attacked by hostile crowds just because they happened to be hanging out in the buff.

Yes, I'm talking about Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip and yes, they were, as the British would say, absolutely starkers.

Actually, it was a sculpture entitled Down By The Lake With Liz and Phil — artist Greg Taylor's creation that showed the royal couple lounging naked on a park bench.

Apparently the sculpture enraged some Australian Monarchists — so much so that they trashed it three nights running. Park officials finally decided to remove what was left of the sculpture to defuse the controversy.

Well, you know what those Aussie monarchists say: no nudes is good nudes.

Antique tour draws visitors to the area

Antique aficionados were out in full force on the weekend of October 21 and 22 as dealers throughout the Kawarthas and Haliburton Highlands hosted an antique tour weekend. Based on the successful artists tours, which have grown in popularity over the years, the antique tour encouraged visitors to travel to a variety of locations throughout the two regions to shop, look and enjoy. Minden antique dealer Ron Gambell, seen here with a visitor, said the tour was instrumental in raising the profile of his store and others in the area. He said that many people who became aware of the tour visited his North Water Street store prior to the weekend. He anticipates the group will promote a similar weekend again next year.

OMHA bantam hockey

Monarchs win one, lose one

Adam Payne outstanding in Minden net against Ops

The Minden bantam B Monarchs are one and one in their first two starts of the 1995-96 hockey season. They have scored nine goals and allowed four.

Minden 7, Ops 1

The Monarchs opened their hockey season with a convincing 7-1 victory over the Ops Flames on October 22 in Lindsay.

Although the score was lopsided, it didn't indicate the calibre of the Ops team. Minden goaltender Adam Payne stole much of the Ops thunder, robbing the opposition on at least three excellent scoring opportunities.

Rod Upton opened the scoring for the Monarchs at the 3:42 mark of the first period, converting a pass from Mike Hamilton. A minute and 18 seconds later Hamilton scored on a pass from Upton.

Stephen Hutchinson notched the third Minden marker two minutes into the second frame, with Cam Neville assisting. Upton scored the next two goals for the Monarchs, rounding out his hat trick. Hamilton assisted on both of those goals. Shawn Casey scored the sixth Minden marker on a setup from Neville and David Burns scored the seventh Minden goal on an unassisted effort.

The lone Ops goal, that spoiled Payne's shutout bid, was scored by Evan Van Kotan with 4:45 remaining in the second period.

Although the game was interrupted by several minor penalties, the Minden contingent played well and the team officials were pleased with the first win. Players were also happy with the win, especially in light of the fact that it is a small team and the players weren't expecting such a big win.

Mariposa 3, Minden 2

The Monarchs went to Oakwood on Thursday, October 26 where they were edged 3-2 by the Mariposa team.

Rod Upton scored the first goal of the game for the Monarchs on a pass from Mike Hamilton at 3:27 of the first period.

Mariposa tied it up with two minutes left in the first and went on to score one in the second and one in the third to take a 3-1 lead.

Minden closed the gap to 3-2 with 2:27 left in the game on a power play when Upton scored, assisted by Stephen Hutchinson and Hamilton.

The Monarchs continued to apply pressure, but couldn't get the equalizer.

Team manager Roger Hutchinson said the game was "filled with minor penalties", similar to the first game.

"This time the home team got more penalties than the visitors, but that is not much of a consolation," he said, adding that some of the penalties were questionable, at best, leaving four or five that were justified.

"As a manager, I can accept that, because at this level of play, some tripping and hooking will be done accidentally and an occasional roughing penalty can be expected in a close contest," he said "I am not condoning penalties, but I wonder what our referees are doing. As I see it, when players are given penalties unfairly, it is very frustrating to them and throws them off their game. It is also very frustrating for the coaches and managers as well. We are a small team (in numbers) and we cannot afford penalties, either justified or unjustified.

The bantam B Monarchs played their first home game Saturday afternoon. Details weren't available for this week's paper.

Midget A Monarchs at .500 after four regular season games

In their first four league games, the OMHA midget Monarchs have one win, one loss and two ties.

Minden 4, Cannington 4

The season opener in Minden on October 14 against Cannington saw the two teams skate to a 4-4 tie.

The Monarchs jumped to an early 2-0 lead, but by the end of the first period they trailed 3-2. Cannington increased its lead to 4-2 with the only goal of the middle frame.

The Monarchs fought back with two unanswered goals in the third period to salvage the tie. Tom Bagshaw led the Minden come-back, scoring a hat trick. Jeff Wray notched the first goal of the game for the home team. Donald Todd picked up a pair of assists and Sheamus Donnery helped set up one Minden goal.

Woodville 4, Minden 2

The next day, the Monarchs played host to Woodville. The final score of that game was 4-2 in favour of the visitors.

Woodville built up a 4-0 lead over the first two periods, notching one in the first and three more in the second.

Minden replied with two in the third.

Ryan Anderson and Chris Nielsen were the Minden marksmen, with assists going to Ben Ripley and Chris Eskelin.

Minden 5, Markham 0

The Monarchs went to Markham on October 21 and came home with a 5-0 victory. Minden scored one in the first period and two in each of the next two frames.

Tom Bagshaw netted the first and last goals of the game for the Monarchs. Rob Camelon notched two in between and Jeff Wray scored one. Single assists went to Eskelin, Wray, Ripley, Marty Detman, Dave Raback and Adam Carpenter.

Minden 1, Bobcaygeon 1

A game against Bobcaygeon on October 22 in Minden ended in a 1-1 deadlock.

Curtis Fielding scored the lone Minden goal, from Wray and Eskelin.

Sherri Walker scores 4 goals

Tyke A Monarchs trounce Fenelon

The Minden tyke A Monarchs started the hockey season off with a bang. They reversed a trend from last season that saw them end up on the short end of some lopsided scores against Fenelon Falls.

It was an anxious crowd that came to the arena on October 22 when the Minden squad played host to the 1995-96 version of Fenelon's tyke team.

The game turned out to be a shooting gallery in the Fenelon end, with Minden skating away with a 15-0 victory over the visitors.

Sherri Walker led the scoring with four goals and three assists. Gavin Hicks notched a hat trick and added six assists for a nine-point game. Kody Smith, Travis Walker, Justin McKelvey and Travis Walker added two goals apiece to the Minden tally. McKelvey, Malcolm Campbell and Jordan Joanu picked up three assists each, Matthew Eno added a pair and single helpers went to Travis Walker, Derek Carpenter and Cody Mills.

Michael Fisher wasn't challenged much in the Minden net. He only had to make two saves all game to earn the shutout.

Minden Men's Hockey AssociationScott Nesbitt notches 13 points in Hartwick's 17-5 win over KDD

by Jerry Grozelle

Hartwick 17, KDD 5

Game one of the October 23 Minden Men's Hockey Association three-game schedule saw Scott Nesbitt earn 13 points. Nesbitt scored seven goals and assisted on six more as Hartwick Construction skated to a 17-5 romp over Kountry Double D.

KDD kept pace with Hartwick for a short time in the first half. At one point the score was 3-3. But Hartwick opened up a 10-4 lead by the time the opening frame was over and added seven more for 12 in a row before KDD scored the last goal of the game.

Dean Sisson netted four goals and two assists; Greg Hurley had a hat trick and five helpers; Lawrence Loughheed and Scott Hamilton picked up a goal and four assists each and Bill Hogg scored one and helped set up three more. Dave Crego helped the winning cause with two assists.

Paul Mayo scored a hat trick and assisted on one more for Kountry Double D. Dean LaRue and Newfer Burke were the other KDD marksmen with one goal apiece. LaRue picked up three helpers and Burke notched two assists. Ed Gibbons assisted on two and Wyatt Nesbitt had one helper.

Stamp 6, Westside 3

The evening's second game started off with a goal by the Westside Jug City team. But Sid Stamp Fuels notched three in a row to take a 3-1 lead into the second half. The Stamp team went ahead 5-1 in the second before Westside netted two in a row to narrow the gap to 5-3. Stamp rounded out the scoring for a 6-3 win.

Carry Gilligan scored twice for the winners with Ivan Ingram, Steve McCracken, Mark Thompson and Dennis McKee adding one each. Ingram, Thompson and Jeff Howe had two assists apiece and Scott Bailey helped set one up.

The Westside snipers were John Stephenson, Kim Hamilton and Kent Taylor, each with a single. Paul Walker and John Hewson helped set up two each and Hamilton picked up one assist to go with his goal.

Home 6, Times 3

Home Hardware took a 3-0 first-period lead and equalled The Times 3-3 in the second half to earn the 6-3 win in the evening's third game.

Charlie Teljeur scored a hat trick and assisted on one more, leading Home Hardware to victory. Dave Hartwick added two goals and two assists to the winning tally. Tom Miscio scored one goal and helped set up two. Ron May picked up four assists.

Jeff Black netted two goals in the losing effort and Craig Smith scored one. Dave Hounsell and Craig Crowe each had one assist.

Peewee B Monarchs tangle with Mariposa, Woodville

by Kim Emmerson

The Minden peewee B hockey team continued its busy schedule with two mid-week games, meeting Mariposa on Tuesday and Woodville on Thursday.

Perhaps the boys had the referendum on their minds when they travelled to Mariposa on Tuesday. The home team scored three times before Jamie Doan picked a tip pass from Dennis Arbour at centre ice and went in alone for the first Minden goal. Greg Kerr got his first tally of the season at 9:03 of the third period, assisted by Doan.

But it was too little, too late as the game ended at 9-2 in favour of Mariposa.

This was the first game James Bleakley ever played as goaltender and he had his hands full. He even had to face a penalty shot in his first game and was successful in stopping the Mariposa sharpshooter.

The game produced five penalties against our team as the players are getting used to body contact. Interestingly enough, the other team earned a penalty for "hitting from behind" which was good to see enforced.

Dennis Arbour also played his first game wearing number 11.

Minden 3, Woodville 3

Just as the Cleveland Indians were preparing for the World Series, the Monarchs were planning for their first encounter with Woodville.

The game was a great improvement from two nights earlier as the Minden boys earned a 3-3 tie for their efforts.

James Bleakley was between the pipes again.

Dennis Arbour got his first two goals of the season and Jamie Doan kept his scoring streak alive by scoring the third Minden goal.

Matt McCord got the only penalty of the game assessed against Minden.

The defense core of Ryan Emmerson, Matt Hutchinson, Tom Perrott and Ryan Lyddiatt, kept the scoring down from Tuesday's contest.

Forwards Brad Gauley, Greg Kerr and Kyle Robinson also backchecked to minimize Woodville's opportunities.

Matt Moore 75, 350T
Brad Brown 100, 200D
Greg Harrison 175, 400T
Dennis Cox 400T
Kyle Burley 350T
Dru Adamson 200, 550T
Matt Mickle 150, 400T

Super spare:

Dru Adamson
Elizabeth Goldenberg
Kelly Berry

CUTTING THE ANGLE: Minden peewee B goaltender James Bleakley cuts the angle as a Woodville forward cruises in during the dying seconds of the game. Bleakley made the save to preserve the 3-3 tie.

Mediation Committee meets to set guidelines and draft procedures

The newly formed Mediation Process Committee, comprised of Anson, Hindon and Minden reeve Jeanne Anthon and councillors Jerry Rome and Daryl Moore, held its first meeting on October 24.

Guidelines for land related issues and non-land related issues were discussed.

In the case of land issues, the Planning Advisory Committee has served as a mediator in the past and it was decided that it should continue as the initial arbitrator. If a mutually agreeable solution can't be reached with the municipality's planner, any costs associated with the process to be shared equally by both parties.

It was decided that non-land related matters, such as noise (which precipitated the formation of this committee) should be handled by an independent mediator to avoid any perception of municipal meddling or favouritism.

Any decision of a mediator would not be binding on council. It would be submitted to council as a recommendation as is the case with other committees.

A list of six points were submitted by councillor Moore to be considered when establishing a mediation process. They were:

- Establish clear ground rules in order that all parties know what is expected of them and what to expect from the proceedings
- The appointed mediator must be totally impartial
- The mediator and involved parties must be provided with all available background, such as by-laws, research and information relating to the issue

- In a joint meeting, the complainant should address the mediator first with absolutely no interruptions permitted. Any outbursts would stop the mediation process.

- After the joint meeting, the mediator should meet individually with both parties, which may promote candid discussion and bring to light any underlying problems

- Discussions are to be considered strictly confidential by all participants; notes should be destroyed at the end of the mediation process

Councillor Rome suggested that the number of people in attendance should not be limited, but that only designated delegates be authorized to speak on the issue.

Reeve Anthon said she would prepare a draft of the mediation process that would reflect those suggestions.

Moore suggested that Lyse Cazabon-Keaney be contacted to see if she would act as an independent mediator in non-land related issues since she is a highly regarded Justice of the Peace and has a working knowledge of legal constraints.

It was stressed that council is not looking for a decision maker, but rather finding a means of attaining a win-win situation between conflicting parties.

Three new members join Minden Lions Club

The Minden Lions roar became louder and stronger on Wednesday, October 11. Three new members were inducted: Jim Mickle, Ray Moore and Peter Walford-Davis. The induction ceremony was directed by Vice District Governor Greg Readman and District Membership Chairman P.C.C. Dale St. John, with the assistance of Club Membership Chairman Goerge Moulton and Lions Dennis Edlington and Tom Gardner.

On Wednesday, October 25, our Lions hosted a joint meeting of the Minden service clubs. In attendance were members from Legion Branch 636, Kinsmen, Kinettes, K-40, Rotary and the Lioness. After a delicious meal, prepared and served by the Lioness, appreciation certificates were presented to each of the clubs for their donations and support of the Lions Medical Centre.

Donations to the Lions Medical Centre are still arriving almost daily. The total to date is very close to $50,000, half of the target of $100,000. We want to thank everyone for their support for this, the largest community project ever undertaken by our Lions.

Hockey pool tickets are available again this year after a year's lay-off because of the players' strike. If you would like one of these tickets, which are good for all Leaf home games, see any Lion or Lioness. Tickets are only $10 each and are retroactive to the first game of the season.

ATTENTION BINGO PLAYERS: The month of November is Food Bank Month for the Lions. Each Thursday in November, if you bring a donation of a non-perishable food item, you will receive one free bingo card for the early bird game. Come out and help prepare the food bank for its Christmas needs.

Life begins anew in a forest of memories

by Andrew Milne

Imagine a forest of 60 foot high living monuments to those who have lived and died, standing on a windswept hill in the northern end of the highlands, paths and places for wild things and curious visitors running around its base.

Gordon Monk, who runs a funeral home in Minden, has imagined, and is creating, exactly that. As of this summer his company has committed to donate one living, four year old white pine for every funeral, to reforest the wind-damaged forests of the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve in the Kennisis Lake area.

The first 45 of those trees were planted last week.

Says Monk, "I just thought it would be such a nice thing to be able to do. On the farm where I grew up there was a 30 acre woodlot — well kept and cultivated. I used to walk in there. There's something about forests — you can find such serenity, such peace in them."

Monk's trees aren't the only ones going in — the family of the late Garth DeMarsh, a snowmobiler who frequented the reserve, had a similar vision, and donated 100 trees to his memory.

DeMarsh died this winter in a snowmobile accident.

Said Haliburton Forest owner Peter Schleifenbaum, "They felt this would be a great way to remember him — he loved this place."

Monk will also be installing a display at the funeral home, to explain the project and give directions to friends and families, should anyone wish to visit the forests the memories of their loved ones create.

Schleifenbaum said he was happy to receive the trees. The Kennisis Lake area was particularly hard hit in the July 16 windstorm system that moved through Ontario — cottagers along the road on the east side of the lake woke that morning to a disaster area. Schleifenbaum, for his part, saw around 2,000 acres of his forests flattened, and another 4,000 seriously damaged — a significant portion of his 50,000 acre reserve. Much of that he expects he will allow to regenerate naturally, but in areas particularly suitable for pine — areas where pine had been growing before the storm, he says, replanting makes sense.

"It's something of an experiment," he says, standing in the area near his base camp where the first batch of trees is being planted.

Schleifenbaum added he expects the transplanted pine will do well here.

"They're starting out at four years," he says. "That gives them a bit of a head start on everything else that's going to start coming up... Pine are well suited to harsh, difficult conditions that keep other species in check. This is just perfect."

The area picked for the planting had contained an interpretation trail, marked with plaques explaining features of the natural environment of the area. The trail, now that the trunks of the fallen trees have been hauled away to the log landings and the brush has been removed, is visible again. It's a bizarre sort of sight — a winding path running through a forest of stumps — the green shoots of a few dozen freshly planted pines peeking up through the rubble, Schleifenbaum's staff and Monk's son-in-law Barry Cray tamping them into place with spades.

A plaque explaining the project will be erected on the trail after the planting.

Nearby, skidders are still clearing away damage done months ago. The windthrow paths resemble nothing so much as clearcuts in their desolation.

Some are acres across, still strewn with brush and horizontal trunks. Massive pine and broadleaf stumps have been lifted and torn whole out of the soil by the elemental force of the winds, throwing rocks and till everywhere.

Monk estimates in an average year around 100 trees will be donated in two plantings — one in the fall and one in the spring. And Schleifenbaum smiles.

"Oh yes," he laughs, "I imagine we should be able to find room for them for a while yet."

Monk says he hopes people will come here to listen to the wind in the trees, and remember the people for whom they were planted.

"What better way to remember?" he asks. "I can just imagine people coming up here, and the peace they'll take back with them."

Time to check the smoke detector batteries

Close to two million Canadian homes could go up in smoke at any time without warning the people inside, according to a random survey of several Canadian Fire Chiefs undertaken by First Alert. The problem: smoke alarms with either dead batteries or no batteries at all inside.

"We see this all the time — often after a tragedy has occurred," said Chief Gary Greene of the Dartmouth Fire Department. "The number of injuries, deaths and losses of property that are the result of non-functioning smoke alarms is a problem that is completely preventable."

Of the 10,387,000 households in Canada, an estimated 94% have a smoke alarm. The vast majority of these alarms are battery operated. Therefore, approximately 1.9 million homes (one out of five) may be at risk due to neglected or removed batteries.

All too often, say fire chiefs, departments have responded to emergency calls, only to discover that smoke alarms have not had their batteries replaced; or that batteries were removed for use in another appliance; or the alarms were not properly installed.

One of the reasons people do not maintain their smoke alarms is that they have misconceptions about the realities of fire. Many believe that in the event of a fire, the smell of smoke will awaken them from sleep.

They assume that they'll have plenty of time to escape or, most commonly, a fire simply will not happen in their home.

"The biggest obstacle fire departments face is public apathy," one fire chief commented. "Too many people go to bed at night thinking it won't happen here. Yet fires do not discriminate — regardless of whether a household has an annual income of $12,000 or $120,000. And, if you don't have a working smoke alarm, the you have no warning."

Consider these facts:

- There is virtually no time to escape. During a fire there is very little time to get out because of the fire's ability to spread quickly. A fire in a waste basket, for example, can spread to consume an entire house in two minutes.

- A fire is black. Unlike the fires we see in movies and television dramas, the smoke from a fire makes it almost impossible to see anything, including the way out.

- The smell of smoke will not wake you. In fact, carbon monoxide and other toxic gases in smoke will put you into a deeper sleep. Firefighters report that most people who die in house fires are found in their beds — killed by deadly smoke that never woke them.

- The heat from a fire is extremely intense. During a fire, temperatures can climb as high as 700 degrees C and can kill a person instantly. Sometimes a fire becomes so hot that the building will implode.

These harsh realities demonstrate the importance of having at least one smoke alarm in every residence, and of ensuring that all residential smoke alarms are functioning properly. First Alert and the fire chiefs of Canada suggest the following routine: each October and April when you change your clocks to or from daylight savings time, check and replace your smoke detector batteries.

NO PATENT PENDING

by Andrew Milne

Sandy Valentine is amused by it all now. She has bags full of mail from firms across the continent, bad memories of sales pitches that sounded like con jobs, even more memories of being laughed at by entrepreneurs who just couldn't seem to take her seriously, and one now rather useless US patent — the patent for an idea whose time, apparently, has finally come.

For seventeen years, from 1977 to 1994, Valentine held the potentially rather valuable patent on the automatic diaper dispenser — the machine, now available in washrooms in such places as Wal Mart stores and the Oshawa centre mall, for parents whose children couldn't wait for them to get home.

Valentine never made a penny on it.

She laughs. "Oh, I tried to get someone to make it," she said. "But they all wanted $50,000 for a prototype or something. I did not have $50,000. I just had a good, simple idea."

And those, she says, are the ones who actually listened to her at all.

"Lots of people," she says, "just didn't take me seriously. I don't know — I guess they just thought I was a ditzy blond or something — I have a high voice. I was young. There seemed to be this attitude that oh, a woman couldn't have a good idea."

She's not bitter, however. Mostly, she says, she's just bemused by it all.

The only reason she wound up with the patent in the first place was because she found herself, like, one would imagine, countless parents before her, in a washroom, in a public place, with an infant in need of changing, and no diapers.

"I just thought," she said, "why not a diaper vending machine? It's a simple, obvious idea. They have vending machines for everything. Why not diapers?"

So, she says, she got the patent and went looking for ways to get the things built. She wasn't especially in it for the money, she says — she just thought it would be nice if the machines could be made available for parents like her, and figured someone somewhere would see the potential in the idea, and help her make it happen. There were no outstanding mechanical problems, no real engineering challenges — as she notes, vending machines aren't a new idea. For such reasons she shrinks from calling her creation an "invention".

"It was just an idea," she says, laughing. "A simple idea, from a simple person — I like that — please use that."

Sandy Valentine, with her expired patent papers.

But in seeking to get the thing built, she found herself in the wonderland that surrounds speculating on new inventions and product ideas — companies that would build a prototype — for prices that seemed absurd.

Companies that loved the idea — and if she'd just send them a ton of money, they said, they'd be happy to run with it.

"I went to this one seminar," she says "It was organized by the government for women inventors. It was ridiculous. There was this one patent lawyer there who was clearly just there to pick up the business."

The horror stories she heard at such events didn't help either. "I saw people crying," she says, "people who had lost their car, their house, everything from investing in an idea."

All of this went on for years. She has two bulging bags of mail now from companies she contacted. Some of the letters are outright dismissive. Others, she says, are obvious con jobs.

"It's funny," she says, "because recently, one of those people who laughed me off years ago, came up to me and said, 'you know, that was a really good idea.'"

Apparently, it was. Now that her patent is expired, a Massachusetts company is building the dispensers. Her husband, Bill, saw one in Oshawa. Change facilities, in both men's and women's washrooms in McDonalds and other public places, are becoming more common, and there's clearly a market for the dispensers.

Valentine laughs, maybe a little ruefully. "I tell you," she says, "you just can't fight the big companies."

She's happy, in any case, that the dispensers are being made available to the people who need them. Her odyssey through the world of patents and inventions, however, she says, should give anyone with a bright idea, reason to be cautious.

"I saw the story last week on Chris Bishop," she says, "who came up with the fishing rod holder. I kind of felt I should warn him and others like him: be careful."

She looks at the mail on the floor.

"I suppose I really should just throw all this out now, shouldn't I?"

Awesome Abbreviations

Know the difference between the GOP and the GNP? If not, the following may help you out. Here are some abbreviations you may have heard of but never knew what they meant.

ASAP: When you want something done in a hurry, you ask for it to be done ASAP, As Soon As Possible.

B.C.: The years Before Christ lived are referred to as B.C. For example, Cleopatra the Queen of Egypt, was born 69 B.C. and died 30 B.C.

CEO: As the head of a corporation, the Chief Executive Officer makes many important decisions.

CIA: Short for Central Intelligence Agency, this group is responsible for gathering and evaluating foreign information vital to the security of the United States.

COD: If you receive a package COD, you better be prepared to pay. COD means Cash On Delivery.

EPA: An important regulatory body, The Environmental Protection Agency's goal is to protect the environment from pollution.

FBI: A division of the U.S. Department of Justice, The Federal Bureau of Investigation is one of the most powerful and influential law enforcement organizations in the world.

There are over 8,000 special agents scattered across the country in both large cities and small towns or based at headquarters in Washington, D.C.

GNP: Considered a basic statistical measure of a nation's economic performance, the Gross National Product is the total market value of all goods and services produced within a given period.

GOP: Used often as another name for the Republican Party, GOP stands for the Grand Old Party.

IRS: The U.S. government's tax collecting agency, the Internal Revenue Service was created in 1862.

MBA: A degree sought by many in the business world, it is a Masters in Business Administration.

MSG: Used widely in Chinese cooking, monosodium glutamate is a flavor enhancer which is known to bring on allergic reactions in some people.

NATO: An association of 12 nations, The North Atlantic Treaty Organization was formed in 1949 to deter potential Soviet aggression in Europe.

REM: The dream state of sleep, it is estimated that humans have nearly two hours of REM (Rapid Eye Movement) sleep per night.

R.S.V.P.: Often used on invitations, R.S.V.P. is a French abbreviation meaning, Respond If You Please. In French it is répondez s'il vous plaît.

S.O.S.: An international distress signal, it means, Save Our Ship.

U.F.O.: Although life on other planets hasn't been documented, many Unidentified Flying Objects have been spotted by people all over the world.

V.I.P.: Everybody gets to be treated like a Very Important Person every once in a while. Hopefully you will soon!

Safety tips for trick or treaters

Here are some important Hallowe'en safety tips from Stay Alert...Stay Safe, the national street-proofing organization funded through the Canadian Tire Child Protection Foundation.

1. Wear make-up instead of a mask so you can see properly.

2. Go trick or treating with a family member or friends.

3. An adult should check the treats before they are eaten.

4. Walk - don't run.

Remember the safety traffic rules when crossing the streets. Only cross at the corner after looking both ways.

5. Only go to homes with lights on.

6. Don't go anywhere with strangers.

7. Don't go into houses.

8. A flashlight will light your way.

9. A short costume makes walking easier.

Staanworth notes

There's a bit more activity in the halls of Staانworth Court, as residents do their Fall housecleaning chores. We are not looking forward to the first snow-fall, but we'll be ready.

Hallowe'en is our next joint venture, when we gather in the hall to welcome all the goblins and witches. It is a fun evening for all of us.

Our athletic types have now switched from lawn bowling and shuffleboarding to curling. Our #1 athlete is Katie Parker who was on winning teams in both sports. After the sumptuous banquets for these two sports, curling is almost a necessity to help one in losing those extra pounds. Katie also claimed a turkey in a turkey shoot for the bowlers.

Fred McKnight is our resident golfer and he sure hates to see those courses close.

We still have a few on the "not too well" list. They are Jean Marsh, Harry Cowen and Mrs. Anthon. A speedy recovery is wished to all of them.

We are glad to report that most of our dart players are getting nearer to that elusive bullseye while the rest are still trying to hit the board. Shirley and Brad "out-dart" the rest of us, but we keep trying.

We are all looking forward to our pot luck supper in early November.

Sometimes

If times are hard and you are blue
Think of the others worrying too
Just because your trials are many
Don't think the rest of us haven't any.
Life is made of smiles and tears
Joys and sorrows mixed with fears.
And though life sometimes seems one-sided
Trouble is pretty well divided.
If we could look into every heart
We'd find that each one does his part
And those who travel Fortune's road
Sometimes carry the biggest load.

Alcohol Management Policy Committee
Public Consultation Meetings

Dwight Lakeview Seniors Club in Dwight
Thursday, November 2, 1995 at 7:30 p.m.
Dorset Recreation Centre
Monday, November 20, 1995 at 7:30 p.m.
Baysville Community Centre
Tuesday, November 21, 1995 at 7:30 p.m.

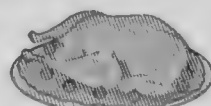

The Alcohol Management Policy Committee would like to invite members of the public to any of these meetings. The committee is working on a policy to reduce the possibility of a Special Occasion Permit holder, a sponsoring group, volunteer workers, participants and either of the townships from breaking the law and/or lawsuits. Public participation in the development of this policy is very important. Please contact Julie Madden at 635-2272 or Cathie Gutjahr 766-9968 for more information.

Literacy Program

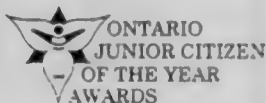

Ontario has...

1.9 MILLION

young people, aged 6 - 18.
We're looking for 12 of the best!

Each year members of the Ontario Community Newspapers Association work together to recognize the best in Ontario's youth and we are asking you to help us find those deserving young people. If you know someone between the ages of 6 and 18 who has shown initiative, dedication and commitment to our community - please contact this community newspaper.

Caribou migration in danger

On October 16 in Washington D.C., hundreds of thousands of African-American men gathered in front of the Capitol building in search of a new sense of worth, family and community.

The Million Man March masked the arrival to Washington of eight Yukon Gwich'in people. The group included 73 year old Edith Josie, Chief Robert Bruce, council of Yukon first nations' environmental coordinator Norma Kassi and four youths, the youngest being nine-year-old Paul Kevin Josie. They had come to plead with politicians to abandon plans that could destroy the Gwich'in way of life.

For the first time in decades, Republicans control both the Senate and House of Representatives. The politicians are poised to throw out three decades of environmental legislation and open up public lands and forests, even National Parks, to the private sector.

It is being done by stealth--amendments and riders attached to vital bills slide by without public debate.

At a press conference on September 22, Secretary of the Interior, Bruce Babbitt, directed his anger at the problem, "The lobbyists are really in control of this place. They're all over. The money-changers are swarming through the temples of democracy in the nation's capital." Babbitt says. "The lobbyists have invented a process here of short-circuiting the normal legislative process."

Congress intends to privatize National Parks and allow mining, logging and development in them. A major focus of this attack is the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, a vast coastal plain along the Beaufort Sea that extends for the northeast corner of Alaska to the Yukon.

The refuge's annual migration of more than 150,000 caribou is a wildlife spectacle that is often called North America's Serengeti. The huge herd moves more than 600 kilometres from its wintering grounds in Canada to calve on the Alaska plains.

In recognition of the significance of the caribou globally and to the Gwich'in people, the US and Canada signed the "porcupine caribou herd conservation" agreement in 1987. The area is also an important habitat for polar bears, which are covered in "agreement on the conservation of polar bears" signed by the five circum-polar nations in 1973.

More than 300,000 snow geese feed in the refuge on their way south and there are resident musk ox, wolves, grizzlies and dozens of other bird and mammal species.

"It represents one of the last true large wilderness areas left on the earth, an area unspoiled, its biological systems intact," says biologist George Schaller. "Our civilization will be measured by what we leave behind. The refuge was established not for economic value, but as a statement of our nation's vision." But now Alaskan oil is running low and the industry is tantalized by the strip of Arctic refuge along the Beaufort.

"This Congress has chosen to deal with that issue in the dark of the night," Babbitt says. "Rather than risking a public debate through the normal process....this Congress has chosen to put that quietly into the reconciliation bill, thereby opening up the wildlife refuge to drilling."

To a suggestion that Congress is merely carrying out what people elected it to do, Babbitt replies, "It's nonsense. These issues were not debated in the last election cycle. The environment and our natural resources were not part of the election campaign mix."

In the anti-environment atmosphere of Congress, it is argued that the US needs the oil from the refuge to counter foreign imports. Yet Alaska has provisions to sell oil to Japan.

If the US used only Arctic Refuge oil, the estimated reserves would last for 90 days. The most optimistic estimates for Arctic refuge would add 0.4 per cent to the world oil reserves and service a fraction of one per cent of the national debt.

The Interior Department estimates that oil drilling on the plain will decrease caribou populations by 40 per cent and musk ox by 25-50 per cent.

Polls consistently indicate that while Americans are concerned about the economy, the deficit and over-regulation, they want to keep strong environmental legislation. The largest majority is against oil drilling in the Arctic Refuge. The challenge is to expose the implications of what is being done, "in the dark of night."

All Canadians, not just the Gwich'in of Old Crow, have an agreed upon stake in protecting the porcupine caribou herd. Babbitt warmly praises Canadian cooperation and protection of the area, but we have to demand that the US live up to its signed commitments.

That tiny band of Gwich'in is fighting for the survival of people whose culture and lives are built around caribou. Their fight is our fight, for the preservation of an irreplaceable heritage for all future generations. Bill Clinton, Jean Chretien and Sheila Copps need to know that we want to keep oil drilling out of the Arctic Refuge forever.

Acid rain report

The following report on acid precipitation was recorded at the Ministry of Environment and Energy site at Dorset.

This report covers the period October 1 to 24:

October 3: 6.3 mm of rain with a pH of 4.52..
October 5: 18.0 mm of rain with pH of 5.12.
October 7: 4.9 mm of rain with a pH of 4.65.
October 13: 11.0 mm of rain with a pH of 4.29.
October 14: 25.8 mm of rain with a pH of 4.62
October 15: 6.8 mm of rain with a pH of 5.31.
October 20: 30.2 mm of rain with a pH of 4.98
October 21: 4.6 mm of rain with a pH of 4.62.
October 24: 13.5 mm of rain with a pH of 4.47.

Environmental damage to lakes and streams is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with pH readings of less than 4.7. pH readings less than 4.0 are considered serious.

Around the County Town

by Jeanne Sears (call 286-1538)

I have had several phone calls recently regarding surveys then getting follow-up calls saying I've won something. Be careful you don't get taken in by these unscrupulous callers and never give out your charge card number on the telephone.

Lisa Anne Raby, daughter of Mary and Reg Raby, and Christopher Thomas Parish, son of Barbara and Tom Parish were united in marriage on Saturday, September 30, 1995 at WigaMog Inn on the shores of Lake Kashagawigamog. The couple are now residing in Minden.

Those who went on the Legion Seniors trip to St. Jacobs and Elmira reported they had a wonderful day with lovely weather, great meals and good company. The bus broke down on the way home, so they were a bit later than planned on getting back.

The following people are on the reported sick list at present and we wish them all a speedy recovery: Jean Marsh, Mervin Gilbert, Gladys Reid, Jim Dugan and Bill Harrison.

October meeting

Minden Women's Institute

by Jeanne Sears, P.R.O.

Members of the Minden Women's Institute met at 2 p.m. at the home of Mary Cox on October 18. President Jean Cox welcomed the ladies and after the opening, the Roll Call revealed where we might like to live if not in Canada, for example Australia, New Zealand or England.

Jean Cox mentioned in her full report of the area convention that a new book is now available, "Fed. Women's Institutes of Ontario" and if ordered by the end of January, we might be able to get it at a reduced rate. She told us that our new board member is Olive McDonald of Cannington. Jean's report was excellent and she learned much from meeting these ladies.

The report from Irene Moore saw 14 cards sent on a variety of occasions and collections for Card Fund and Pennies for Friendship were taken.

Some Tuesday mornings the Legion Seniors group enjoy crafts and last week they had Swedish embroidery and painting leaves on sweatshirts. They do try other crafts and will be happy to tell you all about it so you can take advantage of these fun classes.

Some Minden W.I. members attended the home of Jean Cox to meet and hear Wendy Flett of Fenelon Falls, a volunteer with W.I. Wendy led a discussion on "Services in our Village" and we all gave her an earful and she took many notes. One of the topics, of course, was the health services here however she covered many issues. We hope she will take all the information we provided and some results will come forth.

In August, at her cottage on Horse-shoe Lake, Marjorie Cope had much pleasure entertaining five of her relatives from England. Phil and Pam Stacey came from Exeter in Devon and Ian, Sandie and Lucy Bunyan came from Churchinford, a village near Taunton in Somerset. It was the third visit by the Alice Sedgwick was thanked for sending her pennies as well.

Some members were to meet with Wendy Flett at Jean Cox's home on October 23.

Convenor Jeanne Sears gave some information on immigration with discussion on some questions she had prepared. All showed their appreciation in the usual way.

Tickets were given out for our sale with proceeds going to the Lions Medical Centre and Christmas hampers and the draw will be held December 13.

After adjournment, it was announced that the next meeting will be held at The Terrace on Wednesday, November 15 at 2 p.m. with all ladies welcome. Convenor will be Beulah Hewitt who will give a talk and the roll call is "Home Grown or Home Made". Everyone enjoyed a social half hour and lunch served by the committee.

Bunyans and during their previous visits they were so impressed by our Highlands that they named their home in the country "Minden". On their house is a plaque in the shape of a maple leaf with the name "Minden" inscribed on it. So there is a little Minden in Somerset, England.

Club 35 euchre game winners for October 23 included Pat Scadden with most lone hands, Loretta Lamb and Stan Cline with the highs, Betty Matthews, Norm Lee, Helen Henderson and the 50-50 draw winner was Grenville Griffin. Everyone is welcome to join in the euchre games every Monday at 7:30 p.m. No partners needed. Next Wheels to Meals dinner is November 7 at 12 noon.

Weekly winners at St. Paul's Anglican church on Monday, October 23 included Verna McDonald, Etta McCann, Betty Hardy and Jeanne Sears with most lone hands. The draw went to Fern Donnelly. All are welcome to join this friendly group on Mondays at 1:30 p.m.

Stanhope Bridge game winners on October 24 included Helen Rice and Russ Fair with a small slam bid and made. Other winners were Russ Fair, Mary Stevenson and June Branning. Join the group Tuesdays at Stanhope Library at 1 o'clock, everyone welcome.

Tuesday October 24 euchre game winners at Lochlin Centre included Chris Hill, Earl Schellenberg, Betty Curry, Eleanor Young and Izzy Dednan. Next games at Lochlin will be October 31 at 7:30 p.m. with all welcome.

Winners for the night at The Noble on October 25 were Pat and Marcel Rousselle and Todd Marsh with most lone hands. These games are held weekly starting at 7:30 p.m. with all welcome.

Stanhope bid euchre winners for October 25 included - holding moonshots Milt Fletcher, Grace Dixon, Jim Foster and Grenville Griffin. Winners with scores that night were Marian Hill, Carol Duncan, Edith Russell, Mary Pearson, Norm Lee, Grenville Griffin, Jean Hewitt and Brian Henderson with the hidden score. This group of 30 enjoyed a good time with the Gravenhurst Seniors at a pot luck which was enjoyed by all.

Sincere sympathy goes to the family and friends of the late Frank Keminger and David Besner who passed away recently.

County Town Museum meeting will be held November 1 at 10 a.m. at the Library/Cultural Centre followed by a pot-luck lunch at noon.

Editor's Note: After many years of chronicling the comings and goings of the community, Jeanne Sears has announced she would like to retire from writing this column. We are currently seeking an individual who would be interested in taking on the responsibility. For more information contact Jeanne at the number above, or call the editor at 286-1288.

AT REST

BESNER, David Paul

Suddenly, in Peterborough, on Monday, October 23, 1995 in his 31st year. Beloved husband of Lisa (nee Bagshaw), loving father of Matthew. Dear son-in-law of Tom and Marilyn Bagshaw. Dear brother of Neil and his wife Helene of Hamilton,
Wayne, Peggy and her husband
Paul, Gerald and his wife Rachel,
Judy and her husband Marc, all of Kapuskasing. Predeceased by his parents, Paul and Fern.
Brother-in-law of Tom and Kim Bagshaw of Minden. Remembered by his many nieces and nephews. Will be sadly missed by his many friends and co-workers.

Mr. Besner rested at the Gordon
A. Monk Funeral Home, 127
Main Street, Minden from 2-4 and 7-9 p.m. on Wednesday.
Funeral Service was held in the Chapel on Thursday, October
26, 1995 at 1:30 p.m. Interment Minden Cemetery. Memorial donations to Minden Hospital
Building Fund would be appreciated.

HEINZE, Harold W.

(Resident of Haliburton Lake, Ontario).

At St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough on Monday, October 23, 1995. Beloved husband of Phyllis Williams. Loving father of Robert and his partner Sharon of Haliburton Lake. Fondly remembered by his two granddaughters Sheryl and Susan and great-grandson Alen. Also remembered by his sister-in-law Constance. Predeceased by his brother Charles. Friends called at the HALIBURTON COM-MUNITY FUNERAL HOME,
Hwy #118, Haliburton
(705)457-9209 on Wednesday, October 25, 1995 from 2-4 and 7-9 p.m. Funeral and Committal Services were held in the Chapel on Thursday morning, October
26, 1995 at 11 o'clock. Interment Evergreen Cemetery, Haliburton.
As expressions of sympathy, donations to a charity of your choice would be appreciated by the family.
